Located off Indian Meridian between NE 10th and NE 23rd is the vibrantly colored hotspot for cooling down with your kids in the summer. Bouse Park, featuring the Alexis Clark Water Park, is a great place to bring the kids when the temperatures soar. Fountains spray from the ground and pour from the myriad of rainbow water play equipment. Benches and picnic tables provide seating for those preferring to stay dry.

The Alexis Clark Water Park is open from Memorial Day through Labor Day from 8am to 8pm seven days a week. If the water isn't spraying when you arrive, look for the post with the activation pad near the edge of the water zone, and press to activate the water. The water is on a timer and will shut off to prevent waste, however, you can continue to reactive it as long as you need.

There is no electricity at Bouse park and port-a-pottys are provided for your convenience. Picnic tables at the pavilions are available on a first come basis. Glass is prohibited at the park.

Grab your suits and towels and don't forget the sunscreen!

New in 2018...there is a new playground near the parking for the splash pad.
